A doctor doing an autopsy on an 89-year-old Cuban woman found the complete skeleton of a baby in her womb, a Cuban newspaper said. The bones were almost certainly the result of an aborted pregnancy about 40 years ago, doctors at the Coroner's Institute said. (Toronto Sun, Dec. 4, 1995)

Surprising new research shows that so far in 1995, four times as many farmers have been attacked and gored by their milk cows than in all of 1994. No one can account for the nationwide increase in cow attacks. (WWN, Nov. '95)

More than 200 goats and sheep committed suicide in Inner Mongolia in August, 1995, Xinhua News Agency reported. When the shepherd drove his flock to a lake to drink, two goats with an apparent death wish jumped into the water. This prompted the others to follow. (Toronto Sun, Aug. 4, 1995)

The 5,000 year old canals of Jawa, Jordan still run with water but nobody knows who built them or its city. Evidence points to 3300 BC -- about 600 years before Egypt's Great Pyramids were constructed.

Evidence shows that Earth's average air temperature is going up one degree per century. It is now 1.2 degrees F higher than it was 134 years ago.

A 15-year-old girl, Carmela de Almeida, was bitten over 90 times by a swarm of butterflies. It took place at the popular Butterfly Kingdom in Sao Paulo, Brazil. The park was closed pending an investigation. (WWN, Nov. 21, 1995)

A man trying to hammer in some nails with his pistol shot his wife and himself instead. Richard Gardner, 23, was trying to nail some molding at his mother-in-law's house on Christmas night when the gun went off. He was treated for a hand wound and his wife for a wound to the abdomen. His mother-in-law said she asked him to repair the hallway molding. When he couldn't push it back into place with his hands, he went into the living room and got the .25-calibre handgun. He was using the butt of the gun to nail the molding when the gun went off. He thought the gun was empty. (AP)

In Peterborough, England, Harry Landlin found a stale cheese sandwich in the back of a couch that he was breaking up to throw out. Next to the sandwich was a newspaper dated October, 1925, meaning that the sandwich was at least 69 years old.

The mysterious disappearance of hundreds of people in an area known as "China's Bermuda Triangle" has been solved. Delaying plants around Black Bamboo Ravine, in Sichuan province, produce a "poisonous miasma" that accumulates in the air, suffocating people and making them fall into the abyss. The ravine is said to exert a strong magnetic force capable of disabling compasses and causing planes to crash. The most famous disappearance was in 1950 when 100 Nationalist soldiers fighting the Communists vanished at the ravine. (Xinhua News Agency)

Japanese scientists searched parks and graveyards around Osaka, looking for a tiny poisonous spider native to Australia that has begun to breed near the port city since escaping from a ship two years ago. 70 of the redback spiders were discovered in the Takaishi port district. They can kill infants and elderly people with very painful bites causing swelling, nausea and paralysis.

The journal Nature says scientists have detected acceleration in the melting of the Arctic ice cap. A team of European scientists wrote that Siberia is now warmer than it has been for the past 1,000 years.

The Bembridge Primary School on the Isle of Wight was closed on Oct. 5, 1995 while officials attempted to destroy a colony of poisonous spiders. A bite caused a six-inch bruise on a classroom assistant's shoulder. The spiders are members of the Black Widow family and came from Madeira and the Canary Islands. They were first recorded in Britain in 1870, arriving in shipments of fruit and attained breeding status in the 1960s in Hampshire and Dorset. (Daily Mail, Oct. 5, 1995)

A huge rat-like creature weighing 11 pounds was captured by two Chinese soldiers. It had paws like a cat and a tail as thick as a man's thumb. It was found by members of the paramilitary armed police while on patrol in their barracks on the outskirts of Beijing. The rat was about 24 inches long. (Xinhua News Agency)

The U.S. Defense Dept. says it has no projects that might be causing the mysterious hum that has plagued Taos, New Mexico residents for almost two years. Defense Undersecretary John Deutch said Sandia, Los Alamos and Phillips laboratories in New Mexico and the Univ. of New Mexico are undertaking investigations into the hum, which several residents have said caused sleepless nights. (Denver Post, Cr: Howard Kaufman)

Danish scientists say they have found an entirely new life form living on the lips of a Norwegian lobster. Looking like an animated cold sore on the mouth of its host, Symbion pandora is a simple animal, composed mostly of a funnel with a round mouth. Only 0.3 mm. long, it is attached to the lobster by a stalk. It has a small brain during its swimming-larval stage. This was reported in the journal Nature.

Scientists discovered a spectacular fossil of a 9-foot long ostrich-like dinosaur squatting over a nest filled with eggs in Mongolia's Gobi Desert. The finding suggests that birds inherited this behavior from dinosaurs. The creature, its long arms wrapped around the nest, may have been engulfed by a giant sandstorm some 70 million years ago. The find was reported in the journal Nature.

A hill fort in southern England where a Celtic tribe settled 2,500 years ago was surveyed by archaeologists. They say its inhabitants had a clear class distinction and a complex technology.

EDITORIAL

Lately, I've had a few persons ask me about Gray Barker, although he has been deceased now for 10 years.

He was an educational film producer and a consultant on educational media. He also was involved with running a drive-in movie theater where he lived in Clarksburg, W. Va. With his curious mind he got involved with UFOs when something mysterious happened in the village of Flatwoods, situated between Weston and Sutton on Hwy 4, just east of Interstate 79.

A booklet about Barker was edited by Fannie Hoffman which contained questions most frequently asked him at public appearances, such as lectures he gave at conventions and by correspondence.

He became an expert on ufological matters and wrote three books on the subject: "They Knew Too Much About Flying Saucers," "Gray Barker's Book of Saucers," and "The Silver Bridge."

At one time he was editor of his own magazine, "The Saucerian."

Now you can know what Barker really thought on the UFO subject when you read "Gray Barker's Questions and Answers About UFOs" in this issue of DELVE.

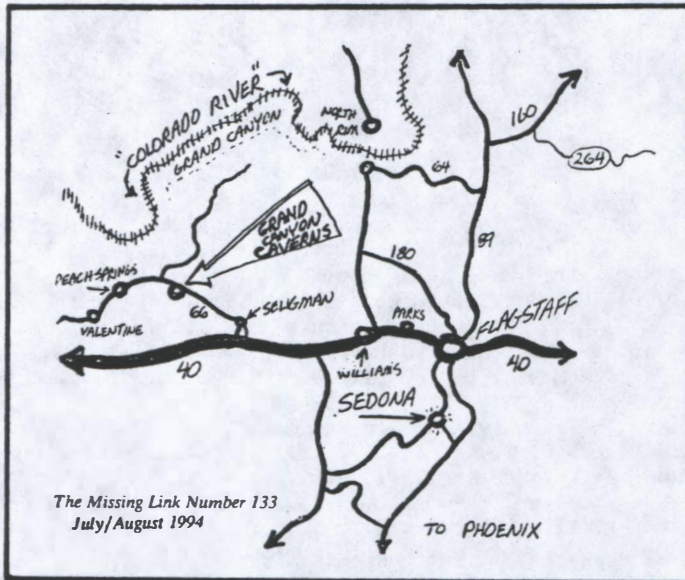

We recently have been in touch with Jan Lamprecht of South Africa. He is very interested in the Hollow Earth subject and we hope to have some new material on this in future issues.

In the meantime, Jan sent us a really good story about a flying snake seen in Namibia. Makes one wonder how many other unusual sightings of strange creatures are yet to be uncovered on Earth.

Robert Dickhoff, otherwise known as Sungma Tenzing Lama, granted us permission to reprint his thought on a "Stardust bank," from which man is a culmination and is used for reproducing useful matter to make things better on Earth. You may have to read this one twice!

If you are exchanging your publication with mine, or sending any correspondence to me, please send it to my name and not addressed to "DELVE". Send your comments or stories to: Gene Duplantier, 17 Shetland Street, Willowdale, Ontario, Canada M2M 1X5

THE GRAND CANYON CAVERNS

Now this is a very INNER-esting place to visit. It is an example of how a cavern sealed from the surface, (you take an elevator to it), can have "pure" healthful air circulating in it (coming from air being forced along with water through the underground river which is below a section of the cavern)

The remains of a giant prehistoric sloth were found here. This cavern has not been fully explored and may link to areas of sacred underground site, nearby.

This area holds many entrances to the INNER WORLD. some of the Third Mesa Hop Clans speak of the Sipapuni (place of emergence) entrance to the Hopi Inner Earth, as being at the bottom of the Canyon on the Little Colorado above its junction with the Colorado River. The location looks like a large mound (or dome) with a circular opening at its top. Currently it is filled with water, but is a sacred place of pilgrimage for the Hopi. A photo of it, taken by the Center of Astrogeology, U.S. Geological Survey can be found in the boo, "PAGES FORM HOP HISTORY" by Harry D. James.

Don Talayesva states: "The Sipapu is full to the brim with yellowish water, of about the same coloring of the surrounding earth, which serves as a 'lid' so that ordinary humans may not see the wonderful things going on beneath the surface." Quote from, "THE FOURTH WORLD OF THE HOPI" by Harold Courlander.

According to the legend, only some of their ancestors came up from the underworld, the rest remained below. Soon the true Hopi will return to the "the womb of the Earth" for protection from the coming purification of the surface of the Earth!

"In the last days 'strange lights' will be seen in the sky and they will be watching the Hopi people to see if they are following the life plan.. and these 'strange lights' will report to the "True White Brother" and they will tell him when it is time for him to come again. Dan Katchogva (Sun Clan)

HOLLOW HELL!

Soviet geologists drilled a hole 9 miles below the Earth's surface somewhere in Siberia and found their drill began rotating out of control. "There is only one explanation--that the deep center of the Earth is hollow," said the group's leader. They estimated the heat in the Earth's core to be over 2,000 F. Then the team heard human screams. "We heard a human voice screaming in pain," the leader said. "Even though one voice was discernible, we could hear thousands, perhaps millions, in the background, of suffering souls screaming." Half the scientists abandoned the project due to fear. THE HELL IT ISN'T!

Gehenna, the Jerusalem valley equated with hell in the New Testament, may not have been a bad place, a Jerusalem archaeologist said. "The valley has been maligned. Only the dead were burned there," said Eilat Mazar. The name Gehenna derives from Geh Ben Himmon, a place the prophet Jeremiah said the children of Judah "burn their sons and daughters in the fire." (Jeremiah 8:21) The seeming association with child sacrifice led New Testament writers to equate the valley with hell, and Gehenna became the formal name for the Christian concept of hell. But findings uncovered at an ancient Phoenician settlement at Ahziv, in northern Israel, indicate that Jeremiah was misread and that Gehenna was a crematorium for the dead, Mazar said.

EMF and UFOs?

by Patricia Mason

The abduction experience is a fascinating aspect of the UFO phenomena and, like UFOs, is elusive and difficult to research. One must rely on the experiencer's memory of the event. Are these events real? Even experiencers themselves question this. There is a physical and measurable force that can effect human perception — EMF. Discovering the role of EMF in this mystery is essential to its solution.

Magnetite is a mineral with magnetic properties. Composed of black crystals, it is the most common form of iron ore mined in the United States. Magnetite is also found in the cells of living organisms such as honey bees, whales and birds. It is thought to act as a navigational aid, a sort of a biological compass. In the early 1990's, magnetite was found in the human brain by a team of Caltech geobiologists headed by Joseph Kirschvink. Samples of magnetite extracted from various areas of the brain were consistent in size and shape. This may indicate that magnetite serves some biological function, but research has not yet revealed what that function might be.

EMF, electromotive force, is created by the difference in electrical potential between two points causing the generation of both electric and magnetic fields. There has been a public debate going on since the 1970's about the environmental issues of EM (electromagnetic) field exposure (such as living near power lines), microwave radiation and pulsed EM waves (the type emitted by a nuclear explosion) and their consequences to human health. This has generated many medical studies as well as a vast amount of anecdotal information about the physical effects of EMF. As a result, there is a significant amount of information available.

The similarities between the reported effects of EMF and the physical and mental effects reported by people who feel that they have had a UFO abduction are tantalizing and deserve further study. Review of the abduction phenomenon in light of the research to date on the effects of EMF on the human system may yield some exciting and surprising answers. For example, pulsed electromagnetic waves can cause memory loss (see Magnetism and Its Effects on the Living System by Davis and Rawls, p.52), a consistent and frustrating symptom of the abduction experience that hinders UFO research.

SIMILARITIES BETWEEN THE EFFECTS OF ELECTROMOTIVE FORCE AND THE UFO ABDUCTION PHENOMENON

REPORTED SYMPTOMS

EMF	UFO
Strange sensation in hands, tingling	Tingling, hair standing on end
Change in menstrual cycles	Female disorders, missing fetuses
Sleep (electrosleep)	Falling asleep at inappropriate times (such as at the sight of aliens)
Allergic responses	Sinus problems
Headache	Headache
Fatigue	Fatigue
Cardiovascular and digestive disorders	Low blood pressure
Disorientation	Disorientation
Stress-type responses	Post traumatic stress disorder

REPORTED SYMPTOMS

EMF	UFO
Poor appetite	Depression
Physiological changes involving muscle or joint pains	Implants, unexplained marks on body, pain during abduction experience
Anti-tumoral effects	Unexplained healing
Memory loss	Memory loss i.e. "missing time"
Acute sensitivity in sense organs	Increase in perceived psychic abilities
Visual phenomena and disturbances in vision	See luminous disks and/or beings
Failure to make electrical appliances work	Electrical appliances malfunction in their presence, "can't wear a watch"

To give a reason for the abduction phenomena is beyond the scope of this paper. There is no hard evidence as to whether the abduction experience is the result of government manipulation of the populace, extraterrestrials, supernatural forces or simply a result of the environment. The true answer is probably far stranger than we can even imagine.

EMF may be the élan vital, the very spark of life that animates our bodies. It may be the force that manifests our consciousness into physical reality. It has been shown to effect our perceptions and feelings. Exposure to EMF may even permanently alter us spiritually. The abduction experience is changing not only the experiencers, it is changing our whole world view. One is reminded of the image of UFOs hovering above power lines. Was this a foreshadowing of future events, or was someone or something trying to provide us with an important clue?

Investigators are going to Turkey's large Lake Van to look for what witnesses, including a provincial deputy governor, describe as a monster resembling a dinosaur.

"It was black and had triangular spikes on its back," the deputy governor said. Other witnesses said its head was hairy and horned. (Toronto Sun, Nov. 2, 1995)

A two-month heat wave in England posed an explosive problem for apple growers. "The sun is already scorching them...but if it rains heavily in the next three weeks, we had better start running for cover because some are already splitting," farmer John Hempall said. "And if they get a good soaking, they'll be going off like grenades." (Toronto Sun, Aug. 18, 1995)

A Polish adventurer has become the first person to trek to the North and South Poles in one year. Marek Kaminski of Gdansk and a friend reached the North Pole on foot in the Spring of 1995, dragging heavy sleds with food and equipment. Kaminski then set out toward the South Pole with 120 kg of supplies and equipment on a sled. He made it on Dec. 26th after 53 days of walking. (AP)

The mystery of the Hurrians, a people said to have ruled a rich Middle Eastern kingdom may be solved. A University of California archaeologist, believes he had found Urkesh, the Hurrians' home. He and colleagues believe the modern town of Tell Mozan, 650 km northeast of Damascus is the site.

Rumors that an apparition of Jesus appeared on a wall in East Tehran on Christmas Day, and healed a paralysed girl drew hundreds of Christians and Muslims to an apartment house.

"I am here to see for myself the miracle that is supposed to have happened here," said a middle-aged Christian man standing with about 50 others in front of a three-storey building. He and other bystanders heard Jesus appeared on the top floor and pointed to a mark on the outside wall of the building and insisted one could see a portrait of Jesus. (Reuter)

Scientists say they have found a huge nest containing hundreds of thousands of fossilized dinosaur eggs in France. The site, in the southern Pyrenees mountains, covered an area of 15 square kilometres of what used to be a sandy beach. The site is 150-million years old. (Toronto Sun, Aug. 31, 1995)

A fragment of a jaw and three teeth found in a cave in southwest China suggest that early humans arrived in mainland Asia more than half a million years earlier than thought, scientists reported.

Coupled with the discovery last year of hominid fossils and stone tools in the former Soviet republic of Georgia dating back at least 1.5 million years, the China finding suggests that this primitive technology was integral to early humans' move out of Africa. (L.A. Times, Nov. 18, 1995. Cr: Howard Kaufmann)

Mice observed living in the Chernobyl nuclear disaster area in the Ukraine have proved their species' notorious ability to escape extermination not only by surviving high doses of radiation, but also by thriving in mutant forms.

Scientists discovered that the mice's DNA had evolved at astonishing rates because on the ionizing radiation around Chernobyl. The variation between the genes in normal mice and the Chernobyl mice is greater than the difference between mice and rats---two species that diverged about 15 million years ago. (LA Times, July 30, 1995. Cr: Howard Kaufmann)

Under proposed provincial legislation, it will soon be illegal to kill bats in Manitoba, Canada. That bodes well for the yearly battle against mosquitoes, as they gobble up mosquitoes during the summer. Although bats are not considered threatened or endangered, environmentalists have recommended they be protected. (CP)

A red-winged blackbird has terrorized residents of Tracksberry Drive in North Bay, Ontario by swooping down and pecking people in the back of the head. "It was like being hit by a softball," said Brian Schubert, who fell from his bike while attempting to fend off the feathered assailant. (CP)

Residents of Hubei province in China have reported 114 sightings of Bigfoot and collected hair and footprints during the past 40 years. The 30-member team from China's Committee for Research into Strange and Rare Animals will send balloons equipped with infrared-sensing instruments about 1,650 feet above ground where hopefully any activities by mammals would be recorded by the apparatus.

Malaysian army and police units joined with wildlife experts to search for Bigfoot after trekkers found fresh footprints. They scoured the dense jungle surrounding Tanjung Piai in Johore state. Officials say the 2.5 metre-tall creature's footprints measured about 20 feet long and show only four toes. (January, 1995)

Police say that Paul Vertog took a deep breath while accosting Greta Sigfried and accidentally sucked in a clump of hair from her wig, getting caught in his windpipe, killing him. (WWN, Nov. 21, 1995)

A California boy, Adrian Benitez, was fatally wounded by a teenager who was shooting a gun into the air to impress his friends, police say. Benitez was struck in the head and died 6 days later. The two were half a mile apart at the time of the accident.

In Melbourne, Australia, Elton John had to cut short his encores after a concert because the stage was bugged -- not with a wire-tap, but with the six-legged kind. A swarm of grasshoppers took over the stage on Friday, 19th, at the National Tennis Center. The hoppers landed in Elton's hair, clothes and mouth, and crawled over backup singers and musical instruments. The hoppers migrated to Melbourne from dry grasslands to the north and northwest of the city. (Toronto Sun, Feb. 22, 1993)

An IBM robot, called Yellow, after its color, is about 1½-foot tall and clad in steel and aluminum, will perform a debut operation on a living human in a Rome hospital. This is a new breed of surgeon, a remote-controlled robot. A surgeon in Milan will give commands down a phone line to the robot in Rome. Later this year (1993) the first transatlantic operation will be carried out when eye surgery is done in Milan from a phone in Berkeley Eye Hospital in California. Initial operations will be simple, such as cyst removals.

From strife-ridden Yugoslavia, over 100 jackals have slipped into Italy. They come down from the foothills of the Alps looking for food in garbage cans.

Three employees of the National Beef Packing Co., in Liberal, Kans., were found dead in a vat of beef blood. The room where the vat is located has little oxygen and workers are required to use air tanks when working in the area. The men weren't wearing them. Police conclude it was an accident.

Tropical grasshoppers that grow five inches in length and having a wingspan of a small bird are turning up in Florida. Harold Denmark of the Department of Agriculture says "It's just a monstrous-looking grasshopper." The first one showed up in January 1992 in a carport. In February another was found in a convenience store. They've been identified as genus Tropidacris, native to Trinidad, Venezuela and Costa Rica.

In Oslo, Norway, a determined ambulance crew that showed up at the wrong address put a healthy Norwegian onto a stretcher and rushed him to a hospital. The man protested but the crew said they were making the decisions.

The ambulance was supposed to pick up an ailing 57-year-old man. The two men both have the same name... 'Leif', live in the same village and had been to the same hospital for tests on the same day of the week.

Meanwhile, the sick man drove to the hospital to register but a clerk insisted he was already there. The men ended up sharing a room.

In Woodbridge, Va., a church's statue of the Virgin Mary reportedly dripped water when a priest, Rev. James Bruse, celebrated mass. Bruse, who also has shown signs of stigmata had earlier been associated with reports of weeping statues at another church.

Mat Sulaiman,, 76, was waiting under a tree on Jan. 17/95 to collect the coconuts that his monkey was trained to pluck when one hit him in the neck, breaking it. The monkeys usually drop, rather than throw the coconuts they pick. The event happened in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, and was reported in the New Straits Times.

A British singer gave a solo performance of a song called Goodbye at his choir's annual dinner... then collapsed and died. "Nothing could be done. He just slipped away," said Leslie Burgess, the choir's director of music. (Source: Reuter. Toronto Sun, Jan. 25, 1995)

A Turkish immigrant celebrating a Christmas Eve wedding with traditional gunfire into the air killed two guests and wounded nine, the Danish newspaper Jyllands Posten said. The man drew a pistol during the wedding festivities Sunday and fired 12 shots, which bounced off the concrete ceiling of the hall. He was charged with manslaughter. Celebratory gunfire is common at Middle East festivities. (Reuter)

Scientist's in Brazil's north eastern state of Piaui are baffled by a crater that was punched into the tropical rain forest soon after witnesses saw a bright light streak across the sky. The crater, 16 feet by 32 feet deep was either left by a meteorite or a piece of a comet. The surrounding vegetation is not burned and the crater's rim is not raised leading to speculation by physicist Paulo Frota that it was caused by a block of ice from a comet. in September '95.

An extremely rare albino whale has been spotted off the Australian coast, prompting a call for whale watchers, seafarers and aircraft to look out for the real-life Moby Dick. (Reuter)

Doctors in Rio Grande, Argentina report that babies and children under the age of 3 are developing dimmed eyesight...and growing hair on their eyeballs. Scientists believe the thinning of the ozone layer and greater exposure to ultraviolet rays may be responsible for the eye changes. (WWN)

In September, 1995, China's Economic Daily newspaper reported that more than 2,000 manhole covers were stolen in Beijing in 1994, mostly by the homeless, who could sell them for around $12 each. As a result, more than 200 people were injured that year falling down open manholes. (UPS)

A series of singing sands dunes has been discovered in the Badain-jaran Desert in north China's Inner Mongolia Autonomous Region. Researchers found that the dunes sing with a soft wind, or groan, and make the sound of an airplane in flight. The sound may be caused when grains of uniform size rub each other and move together. A monkey took out its revenge on a farmer in Ethiopia, Africa, when it was shot and wounded by the angry man whose crops had been destroyed by the monkey. It returned 2 weeks later and savaged the farmer who had to be treated for bites. (Radio Ethiopia, Dec. 3, 1995)

The British Ecological Society announced that songbirds living near motorways are losing the ability to produce their true natural mating and territorial songs because of the discordant roar of traffic that has confused their auditory senses.

The 'Message of Cydonia'

First Communication from an Extraterrestrial Civilization?

By Richard C. Hoagland*

and Erol O. Torun @

Abstract

In 1976 an unmanned NASA Viking spacecraft successfully photographed the surface of the planet Mars. In the subsequent 13 years, a mystery has loomed . . . a mile-long, 1500-ft high humanoid "face" discovered in a northern Martian desert called "Cydonia." Initially dismissed by NASA as "a trick of light and shadow," new analysis presented here reveals a far more complex situation, and a far more significant conclusion:

The "face" and its surrounding "enigmatic landforms" appear to be a carefully laid out, highly-sophisticated, redundantly encoded "mathematical and geometric CETI message" on the Martian landscape — in the tradition of century-old proposals by Gauss, Lockyer, et al..

This paper presents the evidence whereby the authors have reached this "radical conclusion." We — one of us a former NASA consultant, the other a geomorphologist — detail the extensive geodetic and mathematical analysis of "the Face" we have conducted over the past several years: specifically, its geometric relationship to other, equally enigmatic objects in the immediate vicinity. This evidence includes multiple appearances of two specific mathematical constants: "e" and "pi," derived by angular measurement of the placement of key morphological objects around the "face" and the discovery of redundant angles and derived constants from that placement. We have also discovered the two constants — "e" and "pi" — "coded" in the geodetic siting latitude of the "complex" on the planet.

It is this multiple, diversified, but converging geodetic, geometric and mathematical evidence that, in the authors' opinion, now robustly supports the "radical conclusion" presented above.

The geometry and mathematical constants we have discovered at Cydonia appear to be a highly-specific communication of "embedded tetrahedral geometry." It's apparent purpose: the geometric prediction of a specific geodetic latitude — 19.5 degrees N. and S. — resulting from the location of the vertices of a "circumscribed tetrahedron" rotated inside a planetary or stellar sphere. This conclusion is reinforced by the geomorphological observation of a major "tetrahedral pyramid" at Cydonia — connected geometrically (by a 19.5-degree angle offset to the local geodetic meridian) to equally obvious morphological representations of "spheres" at Cydonia itself.

The purpose of all this appears to be to direct attention towards "something occurring at these two specific planetary latitudes." When examined by the authors, using published geodetic planetary maps from NASA and U.S. Geological Survey sources, these latitudes are observed to be associated with a hitherto unknown planetary and stellar energy phenomenon — blatantly emerging at these specific latitudes — on astronomical objects all across the solar system, including the Sun. Further, the appearance of these "energy outpourings" seems to be modulated by the polarity of the planetary (or stellar) magnetic dipole moment — raising, in the author's minds, the possibility that the "message" is attempting to direct us to a verifiable astrophysical manifestation of a basic, "unified field," connecting planetary angular momentum, gravity, and electromagnetism with surface energy release.

The possibility that "the message" is directing us to, not merely energy transfer but energy generation, is also considered in this paper. Several convergent observations of the outer planets, most recently from Voyager 2, are presented to buttress our contention that we may be looking at a new astrophysically-significant form of energy. Evidence is also presented that some manifestations of this energy may be altering the local "gravitational space-time metric" -- consistent with current theoretical interpretations of tetrahedral mathematics by specialists, as "representative of higher-dimensional n-spaces."

The implications of these "real world" geophysical manifestations of "unified field tetrahedral mathematics" -- specific, localized energy release on planetary surfaces, apparently unrecognized until the "Cydonia tetrahedral mathematics" were decoded by the authors -- are profound: ranging from a possible breakthrough in the centuries-long search for a Unified Field Theory connecting the four elemental forces of Nature; to possible technological applications of this knowledge -- including a new energy source, and possibly, ultimate control of gravity itself.

We conclude by urging immediate verification of the "Cydonia Message," via the 1992 unmanned Mars Observer spacecraft, as well as detailed follow-up to our preliminary work presented here.

XIth CENTURY UFO REPORT FROM CHINA

John Brent Musgrave

SOMETIME around the year 1086 the noted Chinese scientist and scholar, Shen Kua, wrote his famous Meng Chhi Pi Than (Dream Pool Essays). These essays contain a wealth of information on astronomy, mathematics, geology and geography, as well as many other sciences and technologies. They are based on notes Shen Kua took as official duties brought him to many parts of China. The Essays include references to strange luminescent phenomena observed for many years near the town of Yang-chou. (Yang-chou is located in the present-day province of Kiangsu, north-east of Shanghai.) From the 7th to the 11th century it was one of China's richest trading cities, and the transfer point for Yangtze river trade onto the Grand Canal. The following account is based on a translation by Dr. Lawrence Lau.

"In the middle of the year Chia-you there was a very big 'pearl' seen in Yang-chou. It was often seen in the daytime. At the beginning, it appeared in the marshes of Tien Ch'ang county. Later it was seen at Lake Pi Shie. And still later, for ten years or more, it was seen at Lake Shin Kai. It was often seen by passers-by as well as local inhabitants.

"My friend's study was on Lake Shin Kai. One night, he suddenly saw the 'pearl' close by. At first, it opened its chamber slightly, and light came out as though a horizontal thread of gold was laid. Soon it suddenly opened up its shell. Its size was like half of a round banquet table, and the white light from the shell was like silver. The 'pearl' was as big as a fist. The light was so brilliant that it could not be looked at directly. Within ten or more li (several miles) all the trees and bushes were illuminated as if the sun were rising. From afar one could only see the sky red, as if lit by a wild fire. Suddenly, the 'pearl' flew off in the distance. Floating amid the waves of the lake it was dazzling bright like the sun.

"In antiquity, there was the pearl of the bright moon. But this pearl did not resemble the moon. It was burning bright with flame, closely resembling the light of the sun.

"Po Chü-I once composed a Bright Pearl Ode. Po I, who often saw the pearl, was a native of Kao Yao. It has not appeared in recent years; where it has gone is not known. The town of Fan Liang was at the place where the pearl passed back and forth. Travellers who passed by there always tied their boats several nights to wait for its appearance, and named the pavilion Wan Chu (Pearl Playing or Pearl Appreciation)."

More than a planet but less than a star, a celestial body known as a "brown dwarf" was discovered by astronomers in the constellation Lepus, not far from Orion. Known as GL229B, it is 18 light-years from Earth. It was found by NASA's Hubble telescope and a ground-based telescope on Mount Palomar in California. The brown dwarf is 20 to 50 times Jupiter's mass making it too big and too hot to be classified as a planet, yet still too small and cool to shine like a star. GL229B orbits the small red star Gilese 229 and is at least 250,000 times dimmer than Earth's sun. (Nov. 30, 1995. Reuter)

At least two moons, and perhaps two others have been discovered in the orbit of Saturn by astronomers using photos taken by the Hubble Space Telescope. The photos were taken on May 22, 1995, during a rare time that Saturn's rings were seen edge-on. At this time, the bright reflected light from the rings is dimmed and independent moons can more easily be sighted. (AP)

Two professors at the Institute of Advanced Study in Princeton, NJ, solved a decades-old puzzle and unlocked a few mysteries of the fourth dimension. Nathan Seiberg and Edward Witten said it makes solving equations in four-dimensional space as easy as solving them in two dimensions. Einstein showed that we live in a four-dimensional world. The discovery offers insight into the strange behavior of subatomic particles called quarks, the smallest building blocks of matter. (Source: AP)

A black hole or thousands of stars rushing toward the core of a globular cluster in M15 has been discovered by the Hubble Space Telescope. From Earth it appears as a single blur of light. It is about 37,000 light years away, in the constellation of Pegasus.

Project Bluestar is a futuristic project where a crew of 200 dolphins will program a crystal computer in outer space, producing holographic images that will appear like TV pictures on a giant sphere of water inside a floating space station. The station is based on one of the magical phenomena of space -- water in zero gravity goes into a sphere in weightless conditions. The computer is powered by ultrasonic sound waves. Dolphins are used because they have experience in zero gravity -- there is no 'up' or 'down' in the ocean.

A flight crew for Aerolineas Argentinas, and aviation officials on the ground, observed a luminous object that approached the aircraft as it was about to land at Bariloche Airport, about 870 miles from Buenos Aires. Flight captain Jorge Polanco said that all the lights in and around the airport went out just as the object departed and he was about to land. Control tower personnel said their instruments started behaving strangely at about the same time. Ground observers said the UFO seemed to have shining lights on its underside. (August, 1995. CF)

A UFO Encounter Festival was held in Roswell, New Mexico, last July 1st and 2nd. There will be 5K and 10K walks and runs ("Alien Chases") a "UFO Float Race" and a two-day Arts and Craft Festival and Trade Show for the first 60 vendors who can guarantee that "all items for sale will be related to UFOs, aliens or extraterrestrial activities. Tours of the alleged 1947 UFO impact site, 45 minutes northwest of town, will be offered both days for $15 an Earthly head. (LA Times, June 25, 1995. Cr: Howard Kaufmann)

Astronomers, writing in the science journal NATURE, tuned the Dwingeloo radiotelescope in Leiden, Netherlands, to a special hydrogen frequency to cut through the heavy Milky Way dust that forms a sparkling arc across the night sky. They discovered a large spiral galaxy which they named Dwingeloo I. The survey suggests that many more galaxies hidden behind the Milky Way remain to be discovered.

Astronomers have seen the birth of a pulsar inside a cloud of gas and dust left by a supernova explosion in the Large Magellanic Cloud near our Milky Way galaxy. It is 170,000 light years away from Earth. The pulsar is turning at a speed of 1,968.429 revolutions per second.

The Crab Nebula, a cloud of glowing gas and dust created by a supernova seen by astronomers in 1054, has a pulsar at its core but this one turns at about 30 RPS and is steadily slowing.

THE FLYING SNAKE OF NAMIBIA

By Jan Lamprecht

I saw a rather amazing documentary on TV regarding the Giant Flying snake of Namibia. The documentary is of very recent origin. In the area of Namibia around Keetmanshoop there have been ongoing sightings going back many decades of a flying snake. The people who've seen this creature are many and varied. Many are blacks, colored people, bushmen or white people. Most are quite old.

There have been sightings as recent as 1982. Some people have even seen the creature more than once. One bushman had seen it twice in his life time. Once he saw a brown creature with spots and the other time a yellowish colored one.

There are some interesting things about the animal: It is like a chameleon in that it changes its color to match its surroundings. Quite amazing is that it has what appears to be a fluorescent "glow-worm" type spot on its forehead and it stands out at night.

One sighting by a local sounded almost like a UFO type sighting of seeing a light flying among the mountains, but he assumed it to be the giant snake.

However, ALL the other sightings were in broad daylight and even there the spot is somewhat conspicuous - though nothing like what it is at night.

The creature described is a long, snake-like/lizard-like creature between 10-15 feet in length. It is approximately 1 foot in diameter, with a large head.

It lives in a clearly defined region which is best described as mountainous desert. It lives in various caves and at different times people have known its whereabouts.

Due to the temperature extremes however, the rocks crack and break and sometimes cover up cave entrances -- so the creature either dies inside (?) or must have moved elsewhere.

The locals say that the creature is not as common now as it was long ago, but it is still seen from time to time. They also fear it as they say it is dangerous.

The single most impressive sighting occurred about 40-50 years ago, shortly after the discovery of the Coelocanth off the coast of South Africa.

What amazed me even more was that the lady involved in that discovery, Dr. Latimer, was called in to investigate a sighting of the "snake" (it sounded more like a flying lizard to me from the various descriptions - as it does not crush the grass like a snake, it moves above it).

She was called to investigate a "close encounter" where a 15-year-old white boy had been "attacked" by the "snake".

The boy's father was a farmer, and for some reason they were losing sheep. (Is it carnivorous? The Komodo dragon eats goats, I think). The father assigned his son the task of looking after a special herd of sheep.

The sheep were grazing near the vicinity of a large rocky hill. The boy saw this creature on three different occasions. The creature was in a crevice near the top of the hill. It looked like a large lizard, but he didn't realize exactly how large it was.

It seemed to live in a cave on this hill. At one point he threw a stone at it and struck it on the head (he must have climbed the hill because it is very high).

This must have angered the animal. Some time later when he saw it again, he looked away and you can imagine his surprise to find the creature had somehow transported itself from the top of this very large hill and was standing right next to him.

The creature took its large tail and struck him a blow to the chest. Then it flew away.

It does definitely seem to be able to fly and not just glide.

Another guy saw it fly down from a hill, land and fly back up again. He said he knows it sounds crazy to say that a "snake" can fly, but he saw it doing just that.

What is fascinating is that when Dr. Latimer arrived, she photographed and studied the area. She could see indications of a large scaly creature which had swished its tail in the area - and photos of this were shown. She was certain it was a reptile of some sort.

When the boy chucked a stone on the creature's head, it puffed up its throat and made a sort of whistling/growling sound. Behind its head were two "wings".

Later, when the boy was struck on his chest by the creature's tail, the boy ran away as fast as he could.

As he ran he looked back and couldn't believe his eyes as he saw the snake taking off and flying upwards back to the top of this hill. You can imagine the steep angle it must have flown at - approximately a 30 to 40 degree angle.

The town's people climbed the hill where they could see the "tracks" the snake had made. They followed these tracks which led to a cave.

Later, someone, an ex-policeman, went and dynamited the cave and they heard as the animal made "growling" noises. It appeared they'd killed it.

It has been seen in Keetmanshoop (southern Namibia) in recent years. One man visiting his family saw it at night in June, 1982. Recently another man reported a sighting to the police in Keetmanshoop.

According to the Transvaal snake park there could be something there. There are huge areas largely devoid of people.

Recently a new species of snake was discovered and documented at the mouth of the Cunene River.

The snake merely seems to have been defending its territory and the attack was probably because it was sick of the boy's continued presence near its home.

The last sighting mentioned occurred in 1990.

INTRODUCTION to something BIG

The following is a transcript of information found in a document which was released by researcher L. M. Graham. Copies of the original document can be obtained from PEA Research., Milpitas, CA 95035, along with other documentation concerning secret technologies allegedly possessed and utilized by secret governmental organizations as well as documentation and information on a possible interaction between deep government groups and a race of small non-human entities commonly known as the 'Greys'.

According to John Lear, William Cooper, and several other researchers the U.S. government may have made a 'pact' with a non-human race as early as 1933. According to some this 'race' is not human as we know it, yet it claims to have its origin on earth several thousands of years ago. Some sources allege that this predatory race is of a neo-saurian nature. This has led others to suggest that the dinosaurs which ruled the surface of the earth in prehistoric times may not have become entirely extinct as is commonly believed, but that certain of the more intelligent and biped-hominoid mutations of that race developed a form of intellectual thought equal to or surpassing that of the human race, and then possibly went into hiding. For instance one branch or mutation of the supposedly extinct sauroid race, Stenonychosaurus, was according to paleontologists remarkably hominoid in appearance, being 3 1/2 to 4 1/4 ft. in height with possibly greyish-green skin and three-digit clawed fingers with a partially-opposable 'thumb'. The opposable thumb and intellectual capacity is the only thing preventing members of the animal kingdom from challenging the human race as the masters of planet earth. For instance the ape kingdom possesses opposable thumbs yet it does not possess the intellectual capacity to use them as humans do. The dolphins possess intellects nearing that of humans but do not possess opposable thumbs or even limbs necessary to invent, etc. Could there be an 'animal' which possesses both of these characteristics? The cranial capacity of Stenonychosaurus was nearly twice the size of that of human beings, indicating a large brain and possibly advanced though not necessarily benevolent intellect. According to researchers such as Brad Steiger, Val Valerian, TAL LeVesque and others this may actually be the same type of entity or entities most commonly described in 'UFO' encounters, as well as the same type of creatures depicted in early 1992 in the nationally viewed CBS presentation 'INTRUDERS'. According to Lear and others the government may have established a 'treaty' with this race, which they later learned to their horror was extremely malevolent in nature and were merely using the 'treaties' as a means to buy time while they methodically establish certain controls upon the human race, with the ultimate goal of an absolute domination. It is also alleged by certain deep-level intelligence agents that the Illuminati, or the 'Cult of the Serpent', is willfully working hand-in-claw with this infernal race which has promised them part of the action once the 'New World Order' is established. The Illuminati is allegedly in it for the power and 'technology' which this non-human race is supposed to give them in exchange for their cooperation. According to John Lear and others, many of the deep underground bases such as those below Dulce, New Mexico and Pine Gap, Australia are actually 'joint' areas where the technology exchanges have been carried out, as well as battles between the humans and 'grays' sparked by disagreements, etc. Could the Illuminati's plans for world domination be backed by an 'alien' vanguard? One unusual point that the following article makes is the apparent connection between the Illuminati's 'Club of Rome' and the so-called 'Greys'. One might ask themselves: If an alien species desired to establish control over a civilization, would they attempt an outright and immediate invasion and destruction of all resistance or would they instead attempt to manipulate situations behind the scenes in order to turn the inhabitants of the 'target' environment against each other, and decimate the population to the point that resistance would be minimal? The 'logical' choice, presuming that the 'aliens' are heartless vermin, would be the latter, and there is much evidence that the 'Club of Rome' has 'sold out' the human race to such alien powers in exchange for certain promises, and that this sold-out power group is carrying out an agenda of MASS GENOCIDE against the human race as a whole, in obedience to their draconian masters. If such an inhuman and alien race exists, then these genocidal 'policies' which the Illuminati-Club or Rome is carrying out no doubt originated from 'them'. As William Cooper has stated elsewhere, whether the 'aliens' exist or not makes no difference, since the 'idea' of the existence of a non-human alien race is part and parcel of the Illuminati's one-world totalitarian plans. This has been confirmed by several researchers. With this introduction, the activities taking place at such underground installations as the Pine Gap Facility may be better understood.

From Dr. Jean Francois Gille, who moved to Albuquerque, New Mexico from France, comes a translation of a French document that exposes the relationship between several factors in the matrix of world affairs. The article, titled - 'PINE GAP BASE: WORLD CONTEXT', was written by Lucien Cometta and later translated into English by Dr. John Gille:

"In order to understand the case of the Pine Gap US base (near Alice Springs, Australia) better, I feel compelled to give some explanations beforehand. I hope these explanations will help to increase the general awareness of the extraordinary importance that facility has for mankind as a whole.

"The majority of people, all over the world, are not lingering in doubt as to whether UFOs and ETs are real. They know they are real. Here in early 1989, no one questions their existence. The case for UFOs and ETs aroused passions, controversies and grandstanding for many years. Some of it has not been quite rational. The matter being relatively settled, public opinions should cool down. It is with a serene and clear mind that we ought to be thinking of our future relationship with the peoples from space. However, the public mind is not at peace. It vaguely feels that the governments are hiding "something real big", and it wonders where our leaders are going to lead mankind.

"During the process of research and study of UFOs and aliens, researchers who do not take the explanations of the scientific establishment at face value have discovered unsettling facts; these facts have started the lifting off (of) the lid of the coverup. The value and prestige of their sources of information do not leave any doubt about the truthfulness of these reports.

DEATH RAY 'BUNCOMBE' SAYS LOCAL SCIENTIST

Doesn't Believe Dynamo Could Be Stopped by "Diabolical Rays"

Canadian scientists poured scorn on the idea of a death ray, as The Star reported May 26, 1924.

"Buncombe." This is the verdict of Toronto's most eminent professor on the recent claims of Grindell Matthews in England whose diabolical ray has created a regular storm in the scientific world.

Professor E. Burton, of the Physics laboratory, does not think as Mr. Grindell Matthews thinks. When The Star asked his opinion he muttered, 'Buncombe' and then added: 'Nobody can positively affirm that such and such a so-called discovery is not true. All I say is that everything now known in the realm of these rays would lead us to believe that Grindell Matthews could not have discovered these rays.'

Professor Burton then showed The Star a paper which had been written by an eminent scientist saying that the two last suggestions of Professor Matthews, had not yet reached the practical stage.

These claims were first to short circuit a magneto of an aeroplane at a great distance away by a high frequency beam and the second suggestion was to transmit high frequency rays over a long distance by using the conducting layers of the upper atmosphere.

Professor T. Roseburgh, the great electrical expert at the University said curtly:

"I don't believe it. I would have to see it first, for there is nothing to lead scientists to suppose that such a thing is possible. I do not and can not believe it. That is all I have to say."

Mr. Grindell Matthews told London scientists that he could stop the dynamo of a motor cycle at will and even kill mice by turning his diabolical ray in their direction.

STARDUST...

by SUNGMA TENZING LAMA

The universe consisting of stars, planets, satellites, asteroids, nebulae, comets, galaxies, with its microbes, germs, spores, men and mice; supermen devas and such dubbed "Gods" by the ignorant, are basic atoms, who in turn are minute solar systems, having positive nucleus and negative electrons as their "planets."

Atoms are the building blocks of the universe, stardust holding all things together, even homo erectus and this is worthy of some attention. By a unique formula of celestial chemistry, one live, infinitesimal small bit of matter, which as a cell formulates proud man, grows in time via a mystery chemistry a handful of stardust—which in my humble opinion may be the sole purpose and destiny of man, having thus created new matter by the handful, for a purpose still a bit vague and secret, so that man does not as yet guess his true purpose and all, important function, besides procreation, the importance to collect these 96 elementals found with this stardust, when man has again fallen into dust.

For indeed, it was decreed cons in the past and not by earthlings, that man in the last analysis should amount to nothing else than a potential hand full of dust, useful for such super science, not from this planet, who needs this matter for their peculiar sciences, perhaps to refuel their spacewagons, perhaps for methods of nourishments.

Proud man, may he be emperor, beggar, philosopher, thief; religious fanatic or heretic—all a culmination of a "stardust bank," contributing to a science alien to earthlings, who may have planted man here for reproducing additional useful matter, to sprinkle the planet like flowers shedding seed, so as to make it fertile for Things yet to come. This basic truth may well be a shock to religionists!

It may be that this form of revitalization via human stardust is highly essential even to the planet itself, since energies of an atomic nature taken off the earth, is thus lost and used up, and there will come a time when the last atom is drained from earth by the "Spoilers" and Space Pirates and the planet will crumble and be no more.

And so man, generously and simple created by the billions here, unknowingly contributes millions of tons of what gives with these 96 elements. It is known that this handful of human dust contains enough iron ore to fashion a fair sized spike.

One can multiply this by a billion and come up with an amazing sum total in tons of iron ore, grown, "cultivated" within the fantastic laboratories of human bodies, deposited within graveyards, so as to store these "stardust treasures" for such as come to gather the harvest. Does it also seem logically to assume, that such aliens as come from other earths, refuel their chariots here with matter convertible from human stardust, will move on, once the planet has been thoroughly exploited and its matter exhausted via "Atom-Zerfall" or disintegration, that these "Spoilers" and Space Pirates then seek out new worlds in the wide cosmos, where again creatures similar to us create additional needed matter in whatever bodies they possess:

Will they merely scoop up, fish out with equipments facilitating such operation, like refueling an aeroplane in midair, thus an actual landing on this cursed planet would not be necessary, by such as wish not to be polluted and degraded by lower forms of animal life such as the human specie. Since only matter is of interest, no matter where such matter lives in its originality, such stardust may exhaust itself and in time even planet three must break up, explode, vanish, which makes little difference to such as cruise the void of space in gigantic motherships with immortal crews, who indeed must laugh at the antics of men, when all they are to them is stardust alive for a while.

GRAY BARKER'S QUESTIONS & ANSWERS ABOUT UFO'S

Edited by FANNIE HOFFMAN

Q. Do you think that the unidentified flying objects for which the Air Force has no explanation at this time are of extraterrestrial origin?

A. Not necessarily. I am gradually changing my thinking away from the outer-space theory.

Q. Do you think they come from somewhere within our solar system, or out of it?

A. If they do have an out-of-space origin, then they are probably from outside our solar system, of intergalactic origin.

Barker

Q. What about within our solar system?

A. If I am wrong about their being of intergalactic origin and they are from within our solar system, then Venus is the most likely point of origin.

Q. What is your theory in this respect?

A. We are pretty sure that the other planets in our system are not capable of supporting life as we know it. Conditions for life on Venus might be more favorable, despite the report sent back by our Venus probe, which was widely disputed by our scientists.

Q. If from outside our solar system, from where?

A. It's incredible to entertain this theory, because of the vast distances which involve light years. It's anybody's guess which one of the millions of solar systems they could come from, if they do come from another solar system.

Q. Have you ever sighted a UFO yourself, which was not explained away to your satisfaction as a natural phenomenon?

A. Yes, but they very likely could have been explained on this basis if they had been properly analyzed. I have experienced no close sightings of mechanical devices as other people are reported to have done.

Q. What about the pictures that appear from time to time showing some strange object in the sky?

A. In my opinion, most of these pictures are deliberate hoaxes. Some of them have been exposed as trick photography and as objects tossed into the air, such as hub caps, by photographic pranksters. A few may be genuine, however.

Q. Do you think there is a pattern to the cycle in which UFOs are sighted?

A. I haven't noticed any definite cycle in such reports. However, a friend of mine who is an astronomer, Lonzo Dove, believes there is a definite correlation between the sightings and the time when Mars approaches closest to the earth.

Q. Is there any populated place in the world where there have been no reports of UFO sightings?

A. Not to my knowledge. Reports from the Iron Curtain countries have been very few in the past, probably due to government censorship. However, lately, more reports are beginning to come from these countries.

Q. With all the sightings over the years, don't you think it strange that there has been no publicly authenticated report of one of the objects landing and being studied?

A. Yes, I do. The lack of mechanical failure in these reported objects might be explained by a greatly advanced technology, or some other factor, such as the theory that they may be coming from another "dimension" — at which we can only guess.

Q. When did you first become interested in UFOs?

A. September 1952.

Q. What brought about your interest?

A. The Flatwoods "monster" incident connected with a reported UFO landing near my brother's farm near Sutton.

Q. Do you read much science fiction?

A. Not any more. When I was younger I enjoyed reading it. My interest in reading science fiction declined when I started my research on UFOs.

Q. Do you think science fiction is usually the forerunner to scientific discoveries?

A. In the past this has proved to be the case.

Q. Can you name a few such discoveries?

A. Rocket ships, the atomic bomb, the laser beam, earth satellites and even "flying saucers."

Q. You too have written a couple of books, although not science fiction. Can you tell us their titles?

A. "They Knew Too Much About Flying Saucers" and "The Book of Saucers."

Q. What theories do you have in regard to UFOs?

A. One theory that interests me very much is that these UFOs may originate in another dimension — that is, a world that coexists with ours in another time space. Another theory is that they may come from some unknown or unexplored section of our earth — maybe even from beneath the sea.

Q. Do you think the people of earth would panic, as some think, if an extraterrestrial ship did land here?

A. No, not to the serious extent predicted by some alarmists, or suggested by the Air Force.

Q. Why?

A. People nowadays are becoming more conscious of the fact that space travel is possible; therefore, they wouldn't be as fearful now as they might have been before we became space-minded.

Q. What is your theory regarding life on other planets in our solar system?

A. I believe that Mars is a dead planet that may have supported life at one time, and that Venus is a young planet on which life, as we know it, has not yet begun. Also, the hostile environment on the other planets in our system would preclude any possibility of life on them.

Q. How about life in the universe outside our solar system?

A. I go along with the astronomers in this, such as Dr. Harlow Shapley. He has stated that there must be millions of inhabited planets with many of them paralleling our earth as far as physical environment is concerned. However, these planets may be millions of light years away. It's almost inconceivable to entertain the thought of space travel over such vast distances of space.

Q. In your studies and research on UFOs, who would you say could be considered an objective writer on the subject?

A. The late Frank Edwards, Dr. Jacques Vallee, Leonard G. Cramp of England, John Keel and John Fuller.

Q. Do you believe, as many do, that the Air Force is withholding information in its report on Project Blue Book?

A. No. In fact, it has turned over all of its records to the University of Colorado which has been given a $300,000 federal grant to fully analyze the Air Force data, and to make a public report on it. Claims that the Air Force has withheld information in the past have been greatly exaggerated.

Q. Do you think the Air Force report made public on UFOs was based on all the evidence and information it obtained?

A. Not completely.

Q. What do you think of its findings?

A. I think its conclusions and analyses of UFO cases have been unobjective, probably in order to come up with the answers that would tend to stop the public clamor and, maybe, to hide the fact that it really had no explanation for some of the sightings. It explained most of them satisfactorily, but left a few really important sightings unexplained.

Q. Have you had any personal contact with any of the Air Force personnel assigned to Project Blue Book?

A. No.

Q. Do you think the Air Force is really interested in getting to the bottom of these reports?

A. I don't really think it is, beyond convincing itself that they are not missiles developed by foreign governments.

Q. Do you think the project was set up just to still the public clamor on UFOs?

A. Actually, I believe the specific aim in setting up Project Blue Book was first, to determine whether the objects reported were military devices from other countries and, second, to find out what they were, if not from other countries.

Q. If I saw an object in the sky which I was convinced wasn't a plane or anything of terrestrial origin, nor an optical illusion, whom would you suggest I call to report it?

A. The nearest Air Force base. It also should be reported to some civilian research group, such as the National Society for Saucer Investigation in Clarksburg, which I organized last year.

Q. We know researching UFOs is not your regular job. What do you do?

A. I am a sales representative for Lovett and Co., a school equipment supply firm which specializes in audio - visual equipment and also produces educational films about West Virginia history.

Q. What would you say was your most interesting experience in your research on UFOs? Most humorous? Most exciting?

A. The most interesting was my investigation of the claims of a Bridgeport, Conn., man who said he had been silenced by two strangers because he learned too much about flying saucers. Most humorous: That was the one about a man in Ripley who announced discovery of a gold ball which he said fell from a flying saucer. My investigation showed that a local scoutmaster had put a layer of bronze around a huge ball - bearing and was using this as a shot-put and it had been found by a rather imaginative person. The most exciting was my investigation of the "mothman" reports. At Point Pleasant, many reliable witnesses had reported seeing a giant, bird-like creature which flew at incredible speeds of at least 100 miles an hour. The reports were quite widespread — but finally died down. There never was any good explanation forthcoming on this creature, but the witnesses were sincere in their reports, and seemed to be reliable.

Q. Can you tell us anything about some of the people you have met in your research?

A. I've met some fantastic people, including those who claim to have met space people and to have ridden in spacecraft, even to other planets and back. Most of the people I've interviewed, however, in respect to their sightings, seem to be quite ordinary people who are not crackpots.

Q. Do you think some of the references in the Bible to "fiery chariots" and "descents of angels" might have been the Biblical version of UFO sightings?

A. The Bible contains many incidents which very definitely, in my opinion, seem to represent some sort of visitation much like that being reported today. Ezekiel's wheel is a good example.

Q. Has anyone, to your knowledge, done any research on this aspect of "flying saucers"?

A. Yes. A good many writers have written about it, including the late Dr. M. K. Jessup, an astronomer. His book is titled "UFO and the Bible."

Q. Can you draw any parallels between the Biblical "fiery chariot" reports and the modern UFO reports?

A. People today report to have been taken for trips in these things, and often these objects are described by them as having a fiery glow, brilliant lights, etc., which might have been interpreted as a "fiery chariot" by ancient peoples.

Q. Do you think that those UFOs for which we have no explanation are capable of traveling at the speed of light?

A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Why?

A. I'm neither a scientist nor a mathematician, therefore I must accept Einstein's theory that such speed would be impossible.

Q. Do you think we will ever be able to develop travel at the speed of light?

A. Until some other findings come along, or someone can prove Einstein's theory wrong, I don't think so.

Q. Since the speed of light is equated with the symbol for infinity, do you think that we, as finite beings, will ever attain it?

A. I don't know.

Q. What is your thinking on this?

A. Not too long ago, the theory was held that we could never break the sound barrier, and that has been disproved. Now we have aircraft that fly at speeds faster than sound. Who knows — some day this may, perhaps, occur with faster-than-light speeds.

Q. What do you think is the fastest rate of speed man will ever be able to develop? Travel?

A. It's hard to predict now. However, fantastic speeds in space are capable of being attained by use of the ion drive and other advanced rocket drives.

Q. Do you think interplanetary travel will become a reality within the next 25 years? 50 years? When?

A. I think that we will certainly be able to land on other planets in our solar system in the next 25 years.

Q. Do you think we will ever develop the know-how for intergalactic travel?

A. Yes, sometime in the future. However, the lengths of the trips would encompass several lifetimes.

FIRE IN THE SKY: THE WALTON EXPERIENCE - By Travis Walton

On Nov. 5, 1975 at 6:15 pm, a group of loggers were in the White Mountains of Arizona when they saw an unusually bright light in the sky. This is the story of Travis Walton who walked toward the light, was thrust to the ground by a mysterious energy force and disappeared. Walton recalls his abduction and his being taken on board an alien craft.

The book includes 8 pages of four-color illustrations and 16 pages of black and white photos. 370 pages. Cloth edition. US$24.95. Published by Marlowe and Company, 632 Broadway, NEW YORK CITY, NY 10012, U.S.A.

CENTER OF EARTH FOR WM REED

He Says There's a Hole at the North Pole, and He'll Enter It.

Mr. Reed's proposed voyage to the centre of the earth was revealed April 18, 1908.

New York — William Reed has incorporated a company to organize and equip an expedition to the center of the earth.

Mr. Reed isn't going to get there by digging. He says the entrance is already made and that he knows where to find it. He has written a book on the subject, and recently he has called together his disciples in New York to consider ways and means. Just as soon as money is obtained and preliminaries arranged Mr. Reed will start for the North, where he expects to find a large hole where other explorers have looked for a pole.

To support his theory, Mr. Reed advances various arguments. He wants to know why the many Arctic explorers have not found a pole if there was one to find. He says that the theory of a prairie fire or volcano in eruption inside the earth will explain the so-called Aurora Borealis more satisfactorily than any other theory advanced, especially as the belief that the northern lights are of electric origin, is negated by the observations of Arctic explorers.

UFO ABDUCTIONS/MAGNETIC IMPLANT RESPONSE

The work of Nicholas Reiter

The following excerpts are a summary of the research underway by Nicholas Reiter. Nicholas is a graduate of Terra Technical College, and is a professional research technologist for a solar cell manufacturing firm. He about thirty years old and has been interested in the UFO phenomena all his life. The following is a brief of the summarization of his research as outlined in Dr. David Gotlib's Bulletin of Anomalous Experience; "Magnetic Implant Response" and "Magnetism, UFO Abductions and the Anomalous". Nicholas does not belong to any large UFO group (e.g. MUFON, CUFOS, etc.) and has been involved in this research for the past three years. Some of the following "quoted" passages are directly from sources listed above.

New observations which may well be some of the most significant discoveries made in regard to abductions, UFOS and mind control were first investigated in the Autumn of 1990. These tests and experiments were performed by Nicholas Reiter and his colleague (AR) in the Dallas area with confirmed abductees using a techniques that can easily be duplicated.

The objectives of these two were:

1. Can the UFO abduction process be understood in the terms of specific technology?
2. Can the abduction implant devices, recalled so often under hypnosis, be objectively detected, studied, and possibly neutralized by electrical, magnetic, or otherwise energy-related means?
3. Can a system of defense be developed against the protocol?

Assumptions for the research/experimentation:

1. There exists an intelligence, of unknown origin and nature, which is currently carrying out an agenda of experimentation, manipulation, and/or resource acquisition using the human race, or certain members thereof, as unwilling subjects.
2. The agenda given in assumption 1 is being carried out with the use of highly advanced technology.
3. This technology appears to be, at least partially, based on forms of energy, or energy-matter relationships, which are currently unknown to, or unacknowledged, by classical physics.
4. The human race has the undeniable right to defend itself to the best of its ability, against the abduction agenda.

The first set of experiments involved trying to find a means to elicit a tangible objective response from abduction implant devices. AR first noticed a "weird" sensation in her volunteers when a large (flux density measured at approx. 2000 gauss) horseshoe magnet had been held up to the region of the volunteers head where, under hypnosis, the volunteer had recalled aliens "doing something to her". The sensation was extraordinary vivid and disturbing to the volunteer. It seemed to be both mental and physiological in nature. In nearest terms it was a "panic" response, a mental feeling of terror or extreme apprehension, coupled with a verified rise in pulse rate and perspiration.

The volunteer (V#1), said that the panic response seemed to duplicate the feeling that she had been subject to in the past, shortly before an abduction related event would occur. Over the course of the following weeks several different tests were conducted with the subject V#1.

1. A large electromagnet (1000 turns of #14 AWG wrapped around an iron core) was substituted for the horseshoe magnet. This coil was energized both with 110V AC and later with 6VDC, in different tests. The response for both were smaller in magnitude than the horseshoe magnet although the symptoms were the same.
2. While using the horseshoe magnet a piece of steel was placed between the poles to divert the magnetic flux away from any external regions of the magnet. This test was performed to determine if the actual flux lines were involved in the response or whether the response was based on other "virtual" effects of magnet.

3. The response (hereafter called the Magnetic Implant Response or MIR) seemed to first appear when the magnet was moved within 18 inches of the volunteer's response region (area of the implant). From this distance inward, the intensity increased.
4. The Tesla Coil Suppression Effect (TCSE) was discovered. This will be discussed later.

Nicholas and AR then started testing other volunteers in Jan 1991. Previous to this their research was being performed with the assistance of V#1 only. On Jan 8, they tested another confirmed volunteer. No communication was allowed between V#1 and V#2. The symptoms experienced by V#2 were identical to those of V#1.

Over the course of the next few months, two other volunteers were tested. V#3 showed a positive reaction with consistent symptoms. V#4 however, felt no response or sensations.

Nicholas and AR started researching the nature of the abductions experienced by all volunteers. They found that V#1, V#2 and V#3 were "classical" abductees, though their specific experiences and ordeals were different. Each recalled, during either their regression, or waking memories, the phenomena most often experienced by those who have been repeatedly abducted (e.g. Grey entities, quasi-medical protocols, possible implant insertion, etc.). V#4's abduction experience were quite "non-standard" and may involve different phenomena.

It was decided that the research should then continue. The second phase of experimentation continued. AR reported the following: V#1 was placed in a chair, and was tested for MIR. Results were positive. An 18 inch tall Tesla spark gap coil was set up in front of V#1. The coil was turned on and allowed to operate for several minutes (then coil's power was adjusted to produce a 4 inch discharge at the secondary. Exact construction details are available from Nicholas Reiter).

V#1 was then checked for MIR and the results were negative. The MIR had vanished. V#1 was checked again 24 hours later and the results were still negative. The nullifying effect lasted for approximately six days. When it DID return it was at a much diminished magnitude. From this observation it was inferred that the MIR had not been eliminated, but had been in some way deadened or temporarily stunned.

V#2 was similarly tested with the Tesla coil and the results were identical. The MIR ceased for a period of time.

Another interesting effect was noticed by V#1. She was given the Tesla coil to take home with her. On several occasions, specifically on certain evenings V#1 would get the feeling that unseen entities were nearby. She found that by switching on the tesla coil, the sensation would vanish, as though the coil was disrupting or driving away the invisible force.

This concludes the studies performed by Nicholas Reiter in conjunction with AR.

Nicholas has continued his research. Lack of volunteers prompted him to start research in a slightly different vein. He started testing subjects randomly, business associates, friends, family, and people on the street were tested with some surprising results.

The subjects were told that some people have the ability to "sense" magnetic fields for unknown reasons and that he (Nicholas) would like to determine if they (the volunteers/subjects) can detect them as well.

The volunteers were placed in a comfortable chair. A galvanic skin response indicator was placed on the second and third fingers of the left hand. The volunteer was then shown the magnet (similar to the one used in the original experiments). The volunteer is asked to verbalize any feelings or sensations which they might experience during the test. The subject is then blindfolded and a few minutes are allowed to let the galvanic skin response monitor to "settle out".

At this point, the magnet is then moved slowly and randomly around the head. Spacing is kept at two inches at all times from the subjects head. Sensations, feelings and GSP monitor response are observed and recorded. When the test is completed the volunteers are thanked and released. If permitted the age, sex, occupation and names were recorded.

Out of the first 24 subjects tested 5 showed a positive response to this procedure. One or more of the following characteristics were noted in each case:

1. A feeling of apprehension or panic.
2. A sensation of pressure or tightness
3. A feeling of disorientation
4. Dark, formless shape moving against closed eyelids.
5. Uncontrollable finger twitching

None of the five random positive response cases were totally identical in symptom. However, the following characteristics were common in all five cases;

1. The feeling was weird or unpleasant.
2. Extreme nervousness and anxiety was present

3. The effect was vivid and definite.

4. The GSR monitor tone increased, indicating increased bodily perspiration.

5. The response occurred at a single, definitive location on each subjects head.

The areas included were;

Case #2 - left temple (in front of, and slightly above left ear)

Case #3 - "above nose, somewhere between and behind the eyes.

Case #13 - Left temple

The above test results were obtained during 1991 and published that same year. Further testing is being done at this time. Nicholas has designed some electronic equipment dealing with a "security" system or abduction prevention equipment. SECRETS OF A SUPER-RACE

SCIENTISTS were stunned when they discovered a prehistoric bison's skull with a neat hole in it. They realised it couldn't have been made by a spear or arrow. In fact, there was only one, remarkable, answer: it was a bullet hole.

That was the same sort of shock hunters got when they discovered electrical equipment—4,000 years old.

There have been so many baffling finds of objects that just shouldn't exist that they've earned a scientific label—"out of place artifacts"—or Ooparts for short.

They include:

● A perfect human footprint in a vein of rock in Cow Canyon, Nevada. It was from the Tertiary Period ... long before our most primitive ancestors were supposed to be walking the Earth.

● A metal screw dropped millennia ago. Its spiral marks were also found in Nevada.

● An odd metal cube found in an Austrian coal-bed. The coal seam dated back almost 12 million years but the cube was made of an advanced steel and nickel alloy.

One group of scientists has come up with an amazing theory about Ooparts. The scientists claim they are conclusive evidence that a superior race of beings inhabited the Earth long before recorded history!

BY CHRIS PALMER

A civilisation which came from Outer Space and which passed on its knowledge before returning to their own planet. A civilisation of alien astronauts.

They point to the bullet-ridden bison as a classic example. It was one of several unearthed in Russia in the 1960s. When it was taken to Moscow's Museum of Paleontology, it was discovered that the hole was made while the bison was alive. The edges were calcified, indicating the animal had survived for a short time after being hit.

Another remarkable discovery was the round "stone", found by rock-hunters searching for rare specimens in the Coso Mountains, in California.

At first, they thought it was a geode—a hollow stone lined with crystals. But when Mike Mikesell started cutting through it with a diamond-saw, he discovered a porcelain cylinder sheathed in copper containing magnetic metal.

Tests proved the object had been buried in the rock some time during the biblical 'Flood'. An X-ray examination showed it was a kind of sparking plug.

The conclusions were inescapable: Somebody, or something, was using electricity 4,000 years ago.

The findings tied in with a discovery which had mystified scientists since 1938.

Dr. William Konig, a German archaeologist, was cataloguing exhibits in the basement of the State Museum in Baghdad, Iraq, when he came across an old storage chest.

It contained 2,000-year-old clay pots which had been excavated at a nearby village.

Each jar held a cylinder of sheet copper, connected to two metal rods. They were primitive—but effective—batteries.

Meanwhile, another cache was unearthed nearby. This time, there was also a collection of thin copper rods which could have been used to link the battery-jars together.

In 1950, electrician William Grey constructed exact duplicates of the jars.

When acid was added, he found that the jars could each produce between 1½ and two volts of electricity. The jars were dated at around 250BC.

"There seems no doubt they were used to create electricity," concluded one archaeologist. "In view of the evidence, it seems the people who made them inherited the technique from some superior civilisation."

"The Stealth bomber you see flying around actually had its primary propulsion system removed from a recovered flying saucer. The project utilizes an alien power plant inside and it's disguised by the use of four GE-F118 engines with a modification called the GE-100."

Bob Oechsler, robotics expert, at Ozark UFO Conference in Eureka Springs, April, 1990

Budd Hopkins on UFOs:

"They're interested in us -- the human being -- and our emotional life and our genetic material. I think they're fascinated by the fact that we're extraordinarily different. I think they have an agenda to rectify their own species by what they can get from us emotionally, physically and spiritually." (Lecture at Spring Valley Library)
